Prompts:

1. Unpopular Opinion

- Give one unpopular opinion
 - Why do you think is it unpopular?
 - What is its counter opinion?
 - Which opinion do you side with and why?
- Example:
- Imagine someone who loves pineapple on pizza, and who, in announcing this wildly unpopular opinion, posts an article about the many health benefits of pineapple. This health rationale has nothing to do with the person's preference, but it might make them feel less sheepish to admit it—and encourage other pineapple-pizza fans to come forward as well.

2. Alternative Ending

- Which movie/season/book had a disappointing ending in your opinion?
- What was the movie/season/book about?
- Why was it a disappointing ending according to you?
- Suggest an alternate ending?
- Why do you think the book/movie/season should have ended in this way (your suggested way)?

Example: The ending of the movie “Seven” was disappointing in my opinion because even if the criminal is caught at the end, the hero goes to jail as well as a result of being manipulated by the criminal (serial killer). According to me, this shouldn’t have been the case as it wasn’t fair for the hero to end up in jail and to end up losing everything- even his family.

NOTE: the above example does NOT have answers to all sub-questions of the prompt. It is just to give you an idea about the right direction. Make sure that your planned content is at least 1 minute 30 seconds long and should include answers to all sub questions

3. Create Your YouTube Channel

(Nowadays people tend to create YouTube channels and share content of their liking, the content either represents their talents or simply the activities they like to do. These creators even have their personalized signatory beginnings and endings for their videos. Now imagine if you have to create your own channel)

- What kind of content will it contain?
- Why do you think such content should be made?
- Will you stick to trends or be more unique?
- What will be your signatory beginning and ending to the videos?

Note: Watch the following video to notice how content creators use their signature opening and closing statements to make their videos unique and interesting.

The above video has been taken from Moriah Elizebeth’s channel who is known for her arts/crafts projects.

Her opening statement, before greeting, is “Hey it’s ME”, where M.E are the initials of her first and second names. Clever indeed!

You can refer to your own favorite youtubers’ videos as well.
